

India evacuates 392 from Kabul

Two Afghan lawmakers land in Delhi

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, 22 August

India on Sunday brought back 392 people, including two Afghan lawmakers, in three different flights as part of the mission to evacuate its nationals and Afghan partners from Kabul in the backdrop of increasing hostilities by the Taliban and deteriorating security situation in the city, after it fell to the militant outfit a week back.

A total of 168 people, including 107 Indians and 23 Afghan Sikhs and Hindus, were flown from Kabul to the Hindon airbase near Delhi in a C-17 heavy-lift military transport aircraft of the Indian Air Force (IAF).

Another group of 87 Indians and two Nepalese nationals were brought back in a special Air India flight from Dushanbe, a day after they were evacuated to the Tajikistan capital in an IAF 130J transport aircraft, officials said.

Separately, 135 Indians, who were earlier evacuated from Kabul to Doha in the last few days by the US and NATO aircraft, were flown back from the Qatari capital city to Delhi on a special flight, they said.

The group of 168 people, who were evacuated from Kabul, included Afghan lawmakers Anarkali Honaryar and Narender Singh Khalsa and their families, people familiar with the evacuation mission said.

“India is our second home.

Afghan airspace closed: Air India flights to US shed extra baggage

Air India is leaving behind up to 50 bags on its Delhi-US flights as Afghanistan airspace closure has increased the flight duration and restricted the payload.

Air India flies the Boeing 777 and 787 aircraft to New York, Newark, Chicago, Washington and San Francisco. While the San Francisco flight takes the eastern route, the other four typically cross Afghanistan, followed by Central Asia and then Russia.

With the restrictions on use of Afghan airspace since August 16, Air India's Europe and US bound flights are flying a southern route via Pakistan and Iran.

This has resulted in around 30 minutes of extra flight time and Air India is carrying additional 5-8 tonnes of fuel due to increase in flight time.

This has led to payload restriction and the airline is forced to leave behind passenger bags and cargo at Delhi.

ANEESH PHADNIS

Even if we are Afghans and live in that country, people often call us Hindustanis. I thank India for extending its helping hand,” Khalsa told reporters at the Hindon airbase near Delhi.

“I am feeling like crying. Everything is finished. It is a very difficult and painful decision to leave the country. We have not seen such a situation. Everything has been snatched away. It's all over,” a visibly despondent Khalsa said when asked about the situation in Afghanistan.

If MPC is an inflation fighter, severity of action is less: Jayanth Varma

I also think that once one takes a longer-term perspective because the downturn in the Indian economy predates the pandemic, and the easing cycle also predates that. The problem is that the easing cycle has lasted for so long and we have still not got the economy on to a robust growth path, and part of the problem has been that the investment is not picking up. The argument that I have been making is that, investment is more a function of long-term interest rates.

If I can borrow money at 3.35 per cent for one month, that's not going to persuade me to set up a new factory. If I am thinking about setting up a new factory, what is relevant is the rate at which I can borrow 5-year/10-year money. Also, I want a high degree of macroeconomic certainty. It is important to provide that assurance that everything is under control, inflation will be under control, the economy will not be subjected to a disruptive rate hike. It is important to provide the assurance of a stable interest rate, stable inflation over a much longer horizon.

How big a worry is inflation?

The biggest threat to macroeconomic stability is the entrenchment of inflation expectations. That becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. Inflation goes up because people think it will go up. What prevents that vicious cycle is an independent monetary policy, which focuses on keeping inflation under control.

What is your take on the bond market?

As an MPC member, I would not want to comment. A lot of it has to do with the central bank's role as a debt manager of the economy. That is not a part of the MPC's mandate. How the government borrowing programme is managed is a different function. The MPC has no role in that. The monetary policy is completely different from managing government debt. The RBI is playing both roles, but the MPC is not.

You seem to suggest a K-shaped recovery in the MPC minutes. Are you suggesting that whatever it takes to revive growth will only increase inequality as inflation hurts the poor the most?

I don't want to go that far. What I am saying is in April and May of 2020, everybody was hurt. The monetary policy, by its very operation, is like the tide that lifts all boats. If the tide comes into an ocean, all boats are going to rise; you cannot say I will lift only those boats which are in trouble. When the distress in the economy is no longer generalised, the monetary policy's ability to redress that is much weaker. The distinction I am making between last year and this year is that, apart from the magnitude of distress following the second wave is lower, the impact is now restricted to some segments. The monetary policy is ill-designed for that.

You have touched upon an important issue regarding the remit of the MPC, by raising the issue of the reverse repo rate. Do you think setting a reverse repo rate should also be part of the MPC mandate?

That is part of the legislative framework and the rules and regulations under which the MPC operates. I think the MPC's job is to operate within what is there. I think the current regulatory regime clearly says the remit is the policy rate, which is defined to be the repo rate.

The government has so far paid ₹164.5 crore to Infosys between January 2019 and June this year for developing the portal.

“The entire assessment process is on hold. The time limits of reopening I-T cases need to get extended beyond September,” said a tax official. Rajat Mohan, senior partner, AMRG & Associates, said the I-T portal is far from functional. Amit Maheshwari, partner, AKM Global, said the service provider was given two years to develop a new portal. “Two years were enough, given the old portal was running smoothly,” said Maheshwari. The new portal has issues like late fee being levied for I-T returns filed after July 31, especially when the last date of filing returns has been extended.

Retro tax...

The CBDT chairman asked tax officers to identify the eligible cases under the new legislation. A template of the communication for these companies has also been shared with the respective officers. Also, the officers have been asked to send details of the eligible cases and the related arbitration to the board.

“Besides the three companies — Cairn, Vodafone, and WNS Capital — there isn't much to refund the other players. Therefore, it is on the companies to withdraw cases and do settlement with the government,” said a government official.
